Choosing a Career with Harrison Predictive Analytics

Whether you are in transition from high school and choosing a career path for the first time, looking for a new challenge with a career change, a concerned parent worried about their child, or creating a new life for yourself post-retirement, we are all plagued with questions and doubts about the big decision in front of us.

The Harrison Assessments Career Navigator System provides the most technologically advanced career and self exploration platform available in the world today. Based on Dr Dan Harrison's 30 years of global research on what drives career performance, it uses predictive analytics to identify and rank from over 700 careers, the specific jobs that you are mostly likely to enjoy and be successful in.

Career Success Requires BOTH Eligibility AND Suitability for the Job

People often end up choosing the wrong kind of job because they only consider their Eligibility/experience for the role, ignoring their Suitability/enjoyment for it. They tend to realize their mistakes only through trial and error after spending years switching from one job to another in an attempt to find a job where they will be satisfied and successful.

There is a better way to identify your best career options and maximize your potential for career success by considering both Eligibility and Suitability.
